

LITERARY NOTES.

The author of that delightful if pathetic book, "Maxima," has lately published in Spain another novel entitled "The Fourth Estate." Senior Valdes says that this last book has enjoyed in his own country a popularity greater than that of all his other novels put together. Mr. N. H. Doole is translating it and Crowell will publish the translation.

Mr. L. C. Sanders is announced as the editor of an "International Statesmen Series," which the Lippincott company will publish. It is intended to include biographies of the great men who have had the strongest influence on the social and political history of the world. The announcement promises studies of the "ancients" as well as of "moderns," but the titles of the volumes thus far given go back only to Fox and Pitt.

Mr. Whittier is quoted by "The Boston Post" as saying that there were drawbacks even to his enjoyment of the scenes which he has described most felicitously. Thus "Snowbound" recalls to him the sufferings from the cold in his brother's home, where the snow beat in through the crevices in the roof of his bedroom, and he attributes his lack of robust health through life to the privations which his readers have observed only through the magic lens of his poetry.

Mr. Whittier is quoted elsewhere as thus replying to a Southerner who charged him with being an enemy to the South: "I was never an enemy to the South or the holders of slaves. I inherited from my Quaker ancestry hatred of slavery, but not of slaveholders. To every call of suffering or distress in the South I have promptly responded to the extent of my ability. I was one of the very first to recognize the rare gift of the Carolinian poet Timrod and I was the intimate friend of the lamented Paul H. Hayne, though both wrote fiery lyrics against the North. I am sure no one rejoices more heartily than I do at the prosperity of the southern States."

Alexander Dumas is one of the few modern authors possessing enough of this world's goods to live handsomely. He has a charming chalet near Dieppe, which is mantled with ivy and filled with pretty furniture and valuable pictures. There he has a splendid house in Paris, which contains marvellous treasures of art. Dumas is now a strong and vigorous man, who bears his sixty-four years well, and with his keen eyes twinkling with wit and malice, his short bristle-mustache, robust appearance and erect stature, he gives one an impression that he is either a general on half-pay or a retired planter.

"Cousin Bette," the volume of the Balzac translations now in the press of Roberts Brothers, has wisely been expurgated for American readers.

Mrs. Amelia Barr, the novelist, is described as an exceedingly rapid writer. Within a period of six weeks she will begin finish and send to her publishers a novel of 300 pages.

New Publications.

HON. JAS. G. BLAINE'S ARTICLE

IN

THE AMERICAN MAGAZINE

FOR SEPTEMBER.

READY TO-DAY.

SPECIAL FEATURES:

THE PRESIDENT'S ERROR

BY

HON. JAS. G. BLAINE.

Being a Criticism of Mr. Cleveland's Message of last December.

TARIFF AND LABOR,

BY

GOV. JOS. BENSON FORAKER,

OF OHIO.

THE AMERICAN NAVY OF TO-DAY,

Illustrated by LIEUT. W. F. FULLAM, showing present strength of the United States Navy.

IN HIAWATHA'S COUNTRY,

Illustrated by CHARLES BURR TODD.

DEAD MAN'S LAKE,

Illustrated by WILLIAM WILFRED CAMPBELL.

Strong Stories Poems and a large amount of Choice Miscellaneous Matter.

THE AMERICAN MAGAZINE is representative of American Thought and Progress, and is a Decided Exponent of American Institutions.

FOR SALE EVERYWHERE.

25c. a Number. 63 a Year.

THE AMERICAN MAGAZINE,

749 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

BABYHOOD.—To the care of infants, 1 to 3 years old, in the mechanical. September number now ready at all newsstands.

Law Schools.

UNIVERSITY OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK, LAW SCHOOL.

JOHN H. CALDWELL, LL.D., Chancellor.

HENRY M. MACCRACKEN, LL.D., Vice-Chancellor.

The Thirteenth Session begins September 29, 1888, and ends June 1, 1889.

The course is designed to give the student:

A thorough preparation for the examinations required for a competent knowledge of substantive law and of pleading, evidence and practice.

A series of lectures and thorough written, as well as oral, examinations are required for a degree.

An allowance of not more than one year is made for previous study.

Prizes will be made for a limited number of scholarships of $100 each to be awarded at the end of the June term.

The schedule of special class lectures for 1888-89 is as follows:

WILLIAM ALLEN BUTLER, LL.D., Admiralty and Marine Law; Jurisdiction and Practice.

AUSTIN ABBOTT, LL.D., Preparation for Trial.

CHARLES A. COOPER, LL.D., Criminal Law.

CEPHAS BRAINARD, LL.D., Admiralty and Practice.

A. A. REDFIELD, Esq., Restraints on Testimony.

WILLIAM E. RICHARDSON, LL.D., Admiralty and Marine Law.

MELVILLE EGLESTON, Esq., Law of Carriers Telephone and Telegraph.

HON. MAYER S. ISAACS, Examination of Titles to Real Property.

Catalogues, &c., apply to PROF. J. F. RUSSELL,

Potter Building 33 Park Row, New-York.

D. R. JAQUES, Secretary of Law Faculty.

Instruction.

Boys and Young Men—City.

Instruction.

For Boys and Young Men—City.

COLUMBIA GRAMMAR SCHOOL,

51ST-ST. NEAR MADISON AVE.

Through training for college, scientific schools and business. Primary department. New and spacious Large building, constructed especially for school purposes. Large hall, gymnasium, etc. No extra charges. Number of pupils limited. Early application is necessary.

Principals: H. B. CAMPBELL, A. M., Principal.

Principals examine applicants and after Sept. 17.

Catalogues at the School and Putman's, 23rd St.

Mr. L. C. Sanders is announced as the editor of an "International Statesmen Series," which the Lippincott company will publish. It is intended to include biographies of the great men who have had the strongest influence on the social and political history of the world. The announcement promises studies of the "ancients" as well as of "moderns," but the titles of the volumes thus far given go back only to Fox and Pitt.

Mr. Whittier is quoted by "The Boston Post" as saying that there were drawbacks even to his enjoyment of the scenes which he has described most felicitously. Thus "Snowbound" recalls to him the sufferings from the cold in his brother's home, where

the snow beat in through the crevices in the roof of his bedroom, and he attributes his lack of robust

health through life to the privations which his readers have observed only through the magic lens of his poetry.

Mr. Whittier is quoted elsewhere as thus replying to a Southerner who charged him with being an enemy to the South: "I was never an enemy to the South or the holders of slaves. I inherited from my Quaker ancestry hatred of slavery, but not of slaveholders. To every call of suffering or distress

in the South I have promptly responded to the extent of my ability. I was one of the very first to recognize the rare gift of the Carolinian poet Timrod and I was the intimate friend of the lamented Paul H. Hayne, though both wrote fiery lyrics against the North. I am sure no one rejoices more heartily than I do at the prosperity of the southern States."

Alexander Dumas is one of the few modern authors

possessing enough of this world's goods to live handsomely.

He has a charming chalet near Dieppe, which is mantled with ivy and filled with pretty

furniture and valuable pictures. There he has a splendid house in Paris, which contains marvellous

treasures of art. Dumas is now a strong and vigorous

man, who bears his sixty-four years well, and with his keen eyes twinkling with wit and malice,

his short bristle-mustache, robust appearance and erect stature, he gives one an impression that he is either a general on half-pay or a retired planter.

"Cousin Bette," the volume of the Balzac translations now in the press of Roberts Brothers, has wisely been expurgated for American readers.

Mrs. Amelia Barr, the novelist, is described as an exceedingly rapid writer. Within a period of six weeks she will begin finish and send to her publishers

a novel of 300 pages.

Instruction.

For Young Ladies—Country.

MISS SPRING'S ENGLISH AND FRENCH SCHOOL,

120th-ST. NEAR MADISON AVE.

Through training for college, scientific schools and business. Primary department. New and spacious

Large building, constructed especially for school purposes. Large hall, gymnasium, etc. No extra charges. Number of pupils limited. Early application is necessary.

Principals: H. B. CAMPBELL, A. M., Principal.

Principals examine applicants and after Sept. 17.

Catalogues at the School and Putman's, 23rd St.

Mr. L. C. Sanders is announced as the editor of an "International Statesmen Series," which the Lippincott company will publish. It is intended to include biographies of the great men who have had the strongest influence on the social and political history of the world. The announcement promises studies of the "ancients" as well as of "moderns," but the titles of the volumes thus far given go back only to Fox and Pitt.

Mr. Whittier is quoted by "The Boston Post" as saying that there were drawbacks even to his enjoyment of the scenes which he has described most felicitously. Thus "Snowbound" recalls to him the sufferings from the cold in his brother's home, where

the snow beat in through the crevices in the roof of his bedroom, and he attributes his lack of robust

health through life to the privations which his

readers have observed only through the magic lens of his poetry.

Mr. Whittier is quoted elsewhere as thus replying

to a Southerner who charged him with being an

enemy to the South: "I was never an enemy to

the South or the holders of slaves. I inherited from my Quaker ancestry hatred of slavery, but not of

slaveholders. To every call of suffering or distress

in the South I have promptly responded to the extent

of my ability. I was one of the very first to recognize the rare gift of the Carolinian poet Timrod and I was the intimate friend of the lamented Paul H. Hayne,

though both wrote fiery lyrics against the North. I am sure no one rejoices more heartily than I do at the

prosperity of the southern States."

Alexander Dumas is one of the few modern authors

possessing enough of this world's goods to live handsomely.

He has a charming chalet near Dieppe, which is

mantled with ivy and filled with pretty

furniture and valuable pictures. There he has a splendid house in Paris, which contains marvellous

treasures of art. Dumas is now a strong and vigorous

man, who bears his sixty-four years well, and with

his keen eyes twinkling with wit and malice,

his short bristle-mustache, robust appearance and erect stature, he gives one an impression that he is